(54) Title: VOLUMETRIC ULTRASOUND SCANNING OF SMALLER-SIZED BREAST

(57) Abstract: An apparatus and related methods are described for obtaining volumetric ultrasound scans of a breast of a supine patient in which a fluid reservoir including a bottom flexible membrane contacts an upward-facing surface of the breast. The fluid reservoir is filled with water or other suitable acoustically conductive fluid until the bottom membrane covering the breast is submerged. A transducer surface of an ultrasound probe is submerged in the fluid and moved over and/or around the breast area to obtain the ultrasound scans. Patient comfort is promoted, the patient being able to relax in a supine position during the procedure with a substantially uncompressed breast. Imaging near the chest wall is enhanced, especially for patients having smaller-sized breasts. Also described are preferred embodiments using multiple transducer surfaces in which shadowing effects are reduced.

Box III TEXT OF THE ABSTRACT (Continuation of Item 5 of the first sheet)

The technical features mentioned in the abstract do not include a reference sign between parentheses (PCT Rule 8.1(d)).

NEW ABSTRACT

An apparatus (300) and related methods are described for obtaining volumetric ultrasound scans of a breast (320) of a supine patient in which a fluid reservoir (308) including a bottom flexible membrane (310) contacts an upward-facing surface of the breast (320). The fluid reservoir (308) is filled with water or other suitable acoustically conductive fluid (311) until the bottom membrane covering the breast (320) is submerged. A transducer surface of an ultrasound probe is submerged in the fluid (311) and moved over and/or around the breast (320) area to obtain the ultrasound scans. Patient comfort is promoted, the patient being able to relax in a supine position during the procedure with a substantially uncompressed breast (320). Imaging near the chest wall is enhanced, especially for patients having smaller sized breasts. Also described are preferred embodiments using multiple transducer surfaces in which shadowing effects are reduced.
